ABSTRACT

In an effort to improve library services, the public libraries of the five northwest counties of Ohio studied possibilities for cooperation in the region. The study included: (1) surveys of the libraries by questionnaires, interviews, citizen surveys, and examination of available information; (2) workshops on reference services, weeding, and publicity; (3) compilation of union lists of reference books, periodical and newspaper holdings, and materials on Ohio; and (4) recommendations and suggestions for further planning and action. The results of the study are reported in both narrative and tabular form. In addition, the appendixes contain inclusive lists of the 23 libraries' holdings of periodicals, newspapers, and reference works and samples of forms used in the survey. (LS)

Many people have provided help for this study and survey of public libraries in five counties of Northwest Ohio. Thanks are due most of all to the librarians of the fourteen libraries and their branches in Defiance, Fulton, Henry, Paulding and Williams Counties who made long and painstaking lists of their Reference, Ohio, Periodical and Newspaper holdings, answered questions, and waited patiently for the results of their efforts.

The Steering Committee of the NW 5 provided constant direction and advice, as did State Library staff members, particularly Mr. Richard Palmer.

Various faculty members at Bowling Green State University have given advice and counsel, particularly Dr. Fred Pigge and Dr. Robert Reed, without whose help it would have been impossible to provide the computerized list of Ohio holdings.

A special thank you goes to Mrs. Anita Knauss who typed the major portion of the report, supervised the statistical compilations, and directed the work of Miss Bonnie Harris and Miss Jenny Evans, who assisted with the typing and the preparation of computerized materials.

CHAPTER I

BACKGROUND OF THE PROJECT

CHAPTER I

Background of the Project

The State Library of Ohio, in developing its five year program for the improvement of library service for the citizens of the State found many problems facing public libraries in the 70's. Among these were:

Uneven distribution of resources.

Inadequate tax resources for support of public libraries.

Lack of availability of professional staff in rural areas.

A wide range of clientele, varying greatly in age, type of interest, occupation and level of education.

Extension of effective and meaningful service to outlying areas.

Stimulation of maximum effective use of materials by potential users who have information problems but are unaware of library resources and services.

Too much library staff time consumed by internal repetitive work.

Increasing salary and operation costs cut into funds for books and other materials.[1]

Among the objectives of the developmental program aimed at finding solutions for these problems were:

[1] Five year program for the improvement of library services in Ohio, with particular reference to those programs which can be assisted by the federal Library Services and Construction Act. The Ohio Long Range Program for Improvement of Library Services, Adopted by The State Library Board, June 13, 1973, Columbus, The State Library of Ohio, 1972.

At the Network level

The implementation of the Ohio Library Development Plan, including development of networks and area library service organizations.

Further development of the ongoing program of continuing education and training for all levels of staff.

Effective mechanisms for and emphasis on planned collection development at the local, regional and statewide levels.

Improved planning among types of libraries for sharing of all types of media.

At the Local level

Development of understanding on the part of library trustees, librarians, and others concerned with library service for the responsibility to assess needs on a continuing basis and to develop appropriate service response. Trustees and librarians should seek to meet needs, encourage effective use of materials, and develop, where appropriate, cooperative programs among types of libraries to give better service and to fully utilize their resources.

Development of a philosophy of service to target groups as a basic part of local public library responsibility, and trustee, administrative, and staff agreement on the priority which should be accorded implementation of such service.

Development of collections and services which meet at local level the everyday library needs of the citizen, the student and the personnel of business and industry.

Development of well planned projects in which local resources are combined with LSCA Title I grant funds and in which the applicant library (or libraries) reflects a strong commitment to such services as a part of its basic on-going program for service to target groups and for the elimination of inadequacies.

Increased attention to evaluation of services, operations and costs, and to improved management.[2]

Five counties in Northwestern Ohio, largely rural in nature with widely separated urban areas, determined in 1970 to explore the possibilities of closer cooperation in the hope of achieving better and more effective library service for the citizens of the region. The Area Library Service Organization [ALSO] plan, according to State Library Regulations "...must encompass at least two counties and population of either (1) 650,000 people, or (2) not less than 300,000 people, with an annual essential services operations grant of 300,000." Too small in population to achieve this goal, they determined that they needed to study their present services, and through the medium of a survey, determine where they were, and where they wanted to go.

The five county area embracing Fulton, Defiance, Henry, Williams and Paulding Counties, has a total population of 150,076. There are fourteen libraries with nine branches financed almost entirely by intangible taxes to serve this population. Although twelve of these are organized as school-district libraries, only three are now housed in school buildings. The others are in separate buildings, and while service to the schools could still be considered the major activity of several of these, service to the general public, including children of course, is growing and developing even in those libraries now most school-oriented. The larger the libraries in general, the stronger the public orientation.

This group of small and medium sized libraries ranging from 391 to 16,281 in population served, and with bookstocks varying in size from 11,972 to 132,587, began to plan on September 22, 1970, when the first of a series of five planning meetings was held at the Napoleon Public Library. Other meetings followed and on December 14, 1971, the now formalized Planning Committee, consisting of one librarian and one trustee from each county, met at the Bryan Public Library, agreed on a five-county Survey Project and began to work on an application form for a LSCA Title I Special Project Grant. By March 30, work had been completed on the application, and "letters of intent" to cooperate with the project if monies became available had been secured from the Boards of the fourteen libraries.

Objectives of the survey-study were to:

1. Develop adult non-fiction and/or reference collections in the fourteen libraries on a coordinated basis.
2. To improve and strengthen staff skills in using these and other materials in a service program geared to the needs of the area.
3. To explore potential areas for short term and long range planning to be developed on a cooperative basis.[3]

A grant of $27,000 was made: $14,000 for collection development grants; $12,250 for the survey, workshops and union lists; and $750 to the administering library. A surveyor was hired, and the project under way. It was originally expected to cover a period of one year, July 1, 1972-June 30, 1973, but was extended to cover an additional six months period, concluding December 31, 1973.

CHAPTER II

METHODOLOGY FOR THE STUDY-SURVEY

CHAPTER II

Methodology for the Study-Survey

The Study-Survey was divided into four major parts for convenience and ease of operation.

1. The first was a detailed survey of each of the libraries to show:
   - a. Structure and government
   - b. Interlibrary relations
   - c. Finances
   - d. Accessibility
   - e. Selection, organization and control of materials
   - f. Types of materials-books, periodicals, newspapers, audio-visual materials, with special emphasis on reference holdings and Ohio holdings
   - g. Programs and services
   - h. Circulation figures
   - i. Personnel
   - j. Physical facilities
   - k. Public relations

2. A series of seven workshops were held, planned and conducted by the surveyor for the benefit of all of the public librarians in the five counties.

3. Union lists of a) Reference books, b) Periodical holdings and Newspaper holdings, and c) Ohio materials were prepared. The first three of these are in list form only; the Ohio list has been computerized, allowing for listings by title, and by any one of ninety-nine subject headings.

4. Recommendations and suggestions for further planning and action.

Materials were gathered and planning done for each of these parts using the following methodology:

Detailed survey of each library

1. Preliminary visit to each library made.
2. Survey form[1] developed to be filled out by each librarian giving detailed information about organization, finances, staff, materials and services not easily available in published reports such as Statistics of Ohio Libraries (State Library of Ohio, 1972).
3. Second visit to each library for in-depth interview with librarian and library staff to determine present programs and services; proposed and wished-for programs and services; bars to provision of such programs and services; clarify items on Survey necessary.
4. Third visit to community with random sample oral interviews with citizens[2] (adult, children, young people, officials, etc.) to determine citizen attitudes toward library; programs and services not now provided, but desired; programs and services now provided, but perceived as not necessary or helpful by the citizen; relationships between library and community agencies and local government.
5. Collection of basic background information about each county and community.
6. Report, embodying results, observations and recommendations for future activities among libraries in area made at end of project period.[3]

Series of Workshops

1. Members of the planning committee indicated that the subjects the staffs of the various libraries felt most need for were in the general areas of Reference work and Publicity Exact topics and dates were determined and a set of seven meetings were set up.
2. Evaluation of the workshops was made by participants and a general evaluation was to form part of the general report of the Study-Survey.[4]

Union Lists

1. Reference books[5]
    a. Each library was asked to send copies of its reference shelf list, in card form if possible.
    b. These were compiled into a union list of holdings.[6]
2. Periodical and Newspaper Holdings[7]
    a. Each library was asked to indicate periodical holdings for magazines indexed in the Reader's Guide, and also holdings for periodicals not so indexed.
    b. These were compiled indicating current holdings of one to five years, longer runs of five to ten years, and those of more than ten years as held by each library with longest runs in the entire area being indicated.[8]
    c. Each library was asked to indicate holdings of all of its newspapers. These were compiled and long runs were indicated in the same manner as for periodicals.[9]

Ohio Materials

1. A form for computer use was devised to give title and subject access to Ohio materials held by the fourteen libraries and their branches.[10] Using the Ohio subject headings list prepared by the Library of the Ohio Historical Society, lists on all of ninety-nine subjects have been drawn from the computer[11] in addition to the title list.[12]

This was a complex series of operations requiring much clerical help and a difficult dovetailing of operations, depending often upon the availability and goodwill of many agencies and persons.

CHAPTER III

THE SURVEYS

CHAPTER III

The Surveys

The principal instruments used to determine the kinds, amounts and quality of library service in the public libraries of the five counties were:

1. A self-survey form which was filled out by each library. (See Appendix A)
2. In-depth interviews with the librarians and staff members of each library.
3. A random sample survey of citizens in the various communities to determine attitudes toward library service as they perceived it. (See Appendix B)
4. The statistics of public libraries as found in The Ohio Directory of Libraries.[1]

The population of 150,076 is served by fourteen libraries, ten branches, several stations and two bookmobiles. The area served is 2077 square miles, largely rural. The largest city has a population of 16,281, the smallest village 391. Population has increased over 1960 census figures by over 12%, and [proportion for 1980]indicate a growth figure of about 11%. It would appear, therefore, that the possibility of reaching the 300,000 population figure required by the State Library Development Plan for the formation of an ALSO (Area Library Service Organization) is not likely within the near future.

The greatest number of subject entries were found under Ohio-History and Ohio-Biography, as might have been anticipated, and some entries were found under all but four of the subject headings listed.[2]

While not a perfect instrument, which will doubtless be refined with later revisions, this list of Ohio holdings will provide significant assistance to libraries in NW5 who are searching for specific titles, or for subject area material.

Supported largely by the Intangibles Tax, total income for library services was $668,208 for 1972; total expenditures was $589,841; and the per capita income was $11.06 over the whole area, ranging from $5.52 to $19.04.

[3] As reported on Library Survey Forms.

Standards for the Public Libraries of Ohio[4] state that the minimum adequate operating budget for an independent community library should be $100,000, and that for each person over 10,000 served this amount should be increased by $7 per capita.

Although only two of the libraries, Napoleon and Bryan, meet the basic figure of $100,000 for 10,000 people or less, ten of the libraries have a per capita support of $7 or more per capita. However, because the population base is so small, even relatively large sums per capita such as Metamora's $19.04 do not provide adequate materials for the residents of the community. Furthermore, these figures do not take into account school populations served, population of branch villages, or persons in the areas outside incorporated villages and towns. Again and again librarians pointed out lacks in materials and services which could not be met with present funding.

When, however, the amounts spent for library service in each county are divided into the total population of the county, a different picture emerges. Table IV indicates that, on a county basis, per capita expenditures range from $2.38 to $6.17.

[4] Standards for the Public Libraries of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio Library Association, 1972.

TABLE IV

INCOME AND EXPENDITURES, 1972[5]

	Total Income	Total Expenditures	Expenditures Per Capita
Defiance	$118,278	$108,556	$2.93

Williams	172,257	135,837	4.03
Total Area	$668,208	$589,841	$3.92

These figures are much more meaningful in attempting to arrive at a true picture of expenditures for library needs in Northwest Ohio and show even more clearly the need for some method of distributing available resources to provide the greatest value for all residents of the area. It also shows a need to increase resources to meet the present standard of $7 per capita for adequate service. Superior service will cost more.

Book Holdings

The five counties reported book holdings of 597,333 or almost four books per capita. This figure meets and slightly surpasses minimum Ohio standards. However, in some of the libraries there was need for weeding in order to remove outdated, obsolete and worn-out books from the collection. Size of collection ranged from 132,587 at Bryan to Fayette's 11,972.

The figures indicating numbers and percentage of books held by type--Adult Fiction, Adult Non-fiction, Juvenile Fiction, Juvenile Non-fiction show some interesting contrasts. Although Ohio standards indicate that from 40-50% of books should be adult non-fiction, only one library fell within that range or above it. The others ranged from 23% to a high of 37%. Fiction fared better. The standards state that from 15-25% of the collection should fall within this category. Seven of the ten libraries reporting this item fell within these limits; three were above it. Juvenile books, including both fiction and non-fiction, should account for from 25-35% of the total volumes. Three of the libraries held volumes in this percentage range; the others reporting were considerably above these figures; the highest being 56% at Swanton. This library is a school district library, serving the schools directly, as are Deshler and Holgate with 54% and 51% juvenile books.

Reference books should constitute from 3-5% of a library's holdings. All but one of the reporting libraries fell within this range.

New titles added each year are another indication of a library's ability to give service to the members of its community.

Of the thirteen libraries reporting on this item, six added books to equal 5% or more of their present holdings, thus meeting the Ohio minimum standard.

Another measure of good library service is found in quality and quantity of staff.

The community library should have at least the following staff:

1. One professionally trained director.
2. One and one-half professionals or college graduates with library experience or training...
3. One library technical assistant, or equivalent...
4. One and one-half clerical workers, including pages for every professional and college graduate staff member.
5. Custodian or contract service.[6]

[6] Standards for the Public Libraries of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio Library Association, 1972.

The small community libraries serving far less than 10,000 persons obviously will not meet these standards, and none do. However, it is interesting to see how the five county extension centers, serving not only the local population, but also those otherwise unserved measure up.

TABLE X

STAFF IN COUNTY EXTENSION CENTERS

(In approximately full-time equivalents)

County	Defiance	Fulton	Henry	Paulding	Williams
Place	Defiance	Delta	Napoleon	Paulding	Bryan
Number of persons to be served	36,949	20,396	21,500	19,329	29,485
Professionally trained director	1		1	1	1
College with library experience or training		1	1		3
Library Technical Assistant		1			1
Clerical workers	7	2	6	3-1/2	4
Custodian or contract	Available or contract service in all libraries

Four of the five-county extension centers have professionally trained librarians; three of the five have at least one college graduate with library experience or training; only two have persons who, by definition, might be called technical assistants. Clerical workers and aides greatly outnumber those with higher training.

In the total area there are four persons with full professional training; five with a B.A. and at least fifteen hours of library training; five with a B.A. or higher, and no hours of library training. About forty-five people (in full-time equivalent) serve as supporting staff. To serve a population of 150,000 there should be about twenty-five professionals and fifty supportive staff.[7]

Although there may be weaknesses in numbers of professionally educated staff, and supporting members, there is no weakness in dedication of the various staffs to the ideals of library service. Here the region shines, and great credit should go to those who without adequate materials, funds, or physical quarters have continued to work for better service to their communities.

Special services are provided in many libraries. All have story hours, at least in the summer. Most have a winter program also. Other types of special service, indicated in Table XI, were available, but were limited by time and space. One of the most frequently expressed wishes of the librarians was for the institution of various kinds of special services for patrons, now impossible.

Except for local history collections and some collections of large print books, there were no sizeable special collections in any of the libraries. This is not surprising, given the small size of the libraries, and the limited space available in most of them.

Use of Materials

In order to find out more about patron use of the materials and services of the libraries in the region, April 2-7, 1973 was chosen as a typical week during which detailed records were kept of circulation, interlibrary loan, reference questions answered, and special programs or services rendered.

During that week 23,012 pieces of material were circulated from thirteen libraries and their branches. Juvenile fiction, as might be expected from the relative size and strength of the juvenile vs. the adult collections dominated. Surprising strength was shown in the number of periodicals circulated. This may be because of student use of periodicals in the school-public libraries. Recordings and pamphlets also were circulated in sizeable numbers, but it is apparent that other forms of non-book material are just beginning to be used in Northwest Ohio. The following table gives a breakdown of circulation statistics.

Another aspect of library service is the use of interlibrary loan. Free use of this service helps the smaller community library to serve its patrons with resources not available locally. During the week of April 2-7, eight libraries received sixty-seven books and sixty-five pieces of copied material from other libraries. Two libraries sent books to libraries within the area. Closer knowledge of materials available throughout the five counties, particularly of specialized holdings, could provide increased opportunity for this form of service.

Other special services were provided during the week. Three hundred forty-six children attended story hours in eleven of the libraries and branches. A book review, a mother's discussion group, a special book exhibit and a visit to the library by about two hundred fifty school children were other events taking place in various libraries throughout the area. Few of the libraries have meeting room facilities, so that the use of facilities was not noted. Even so, activities tying into community interests should be encouraged whenever possible.

The libraries were asked to tabulate reference services in three categories: a) Ready reference questions which could be answered by quick use of handbooks, dictionaries, or the like; b) Directional questions which could be answered by a sentence or two of explanation, as to the locations of specific materials or subjects within the library; and c) The research question which required five minutes or more time on the librarian's part. These definitions grew out of those used in one of the workshops which had for its theme, "What is a Reference Question." It is not possible to know whether all libraries interpreted these terms in exactly the same way, but, on balance, the answers are probably reasonably accurate, and do show a clear picture of the amount of this activity in each of the libraries in the week in question.

All libraries and branches responded to this portion of the self-survey except for Liberty Center, moving as the aftermath of a fire. All of the libraries and most of the branches answered the equivalent of at least one reference, and one directional question per day and all but three answered the equivalent of one research question per day.

Table XV shows the number of each kind of question answered in each library during the survey week. School-Public libraries, possibly because of their school orientation appeared to do more reference work in relation to size of population served, than the purely public libraries. As might also be expected, the larger libraries tended to answer more research questions, probably due in part to larger and more adequate reference collections. It would have been interesting to have attempted to determine how many research questions asked went unanswered because material was not available in the library. It would also have been interesting to attempt to determine how many of those questions could have been answered by books available in other libraries of the area. Continued strengthening of reference resources, with location of specialized materials known to all, and provision for borrowing or copying portions of books is one way of providing better services. The list of reference holdings, the list of periodical holdings, the Ohio list and the newspaper holdings lists, gathered as part of this survey, and described in detail elsewhere are tools to help achieve better reference service.

Random Sample Interview

Another method of determining the effectiveness of library service in Northwestern Ohio was through the use of a random sample survey interview with citizens in each of the towns with library service. In consultation with experts in interview techniques at Bowling Green State University, a form was devised,[8] and three hundred forty-nine people were interviewed, roughly a ratio of one to eighty of the population of the towns with library service (including branches).

Two graduate students were hired to conduct the interviews. They were instructed to attempt to interview persons in all age groups, and divided between males and females.

Of those interviewed who used the library, two hundred twenty-six said that they lived in the city or village where they were interviewed, sixty-seven in a rural area in the county, twenty-six in another city in the county, and five persons lived outside the county.

Most used the library weekly or monthly, but about fifteen persons used it as seldom as once a year. Almost everyone came to the library to make use of materials, but twenty-three people used the library's services by phone, and only six used it both by phone and in person.

Two hundred twenty-four persons said they used books, one hundred forty-seven said they used periodicals, but only ten persons said they used recordings or films.

[8] Format for Random Sample Interview (Oral), Appendix B.

About a quarter of those interviewed used materials only in the library while the other three quarters usually took materials home. Interestingly, only about twenty-five persons said that they borrowed and used materials in the library about equally. When asked how they used the library, two hundred persons stated that they used it mainly for pleasure reading; one hundred thirty-two said that they used it to get specific information, and forty-two said that school work was what brought them to the library.

When asked what they particularly liked about their libraries: helpful staff, accessible location, a good collection, a comfortable atmosphere, were the answers most often given. Wheel chair service, the building, and a "quiet place" were among the other items appreciated.

Dislikes included the hours, often too few, or hard to remember, the location-hard to park-too far away; crowded building conditions. A few people objected to the noise, and one person said that the library was too quiet! Slowness in getting materials and disinterested librarian were also mentioned.

Services not now provided, but desired included book reviews, services for shut-ins, and film reviews.

Materials not now available, but desired by citizens included more periodicals, more films, more reference materials. Table XVI details these requests.

Occupations of those using the library were varied. The greatest number (74) were housewives, followed by students (63), retired persons (46), and businessmen and merchants (36). Clerks (12) and secretaries (11) came next, followed by foremen (8) and farmers (7). In all there were about fifty different occupations listed.

Persons who reported using other libraries than the one located in the town where interviewed used the larger libraries near them-Bryan, Toledo, Napoleon, Defiance and Ft. Wayne, as well as a scattering of the smaller libraries.

The reasons why people did not use the library were many and varied, but the most reported were: no time (46), or no interest in reading (18). A third reason for not using the library was availability of books through book clubs. Other people indicated that eyesight was no longer good, that newspapers and magazines were all the reading needed. Several persons could not read well, and two persons said that TV was all they needed. Two others just didn't want to read.

The last question on the interview schedule asked for other suggestions for the improvement of service. Few were received, but brighter color was suggested for one library and longer and more convenient hours for another.

The citizens who use the libraries are, on the whole, satisfied with the services they receive, and are appreciative of the efforts made by the library staffs to serve them with the often limited resources available. They do wish however, that library hours were more suited to their needs and that more materials especially periodicals, films and reference books were available to them.

CHAPTER IV

THE WORKSHOPS

CHAPTER IV

The Workshops

A series of workshops for the staff of the participating libraries was one of the activities undertaken by the surveyor-consultant. With the advice of the Planning Committee it was determined that a series of workshops on Reference Work, Weeding and Publicity be held during the year.

The first of these was held at Bowling Green on November 14, 1972. Persons to be invited were librarians and any other staff members who choose reference books and/or adult non-fiction. Since funds had been given to each library for reference and adult non-fiction books as a part of the State Library grant, this seemed a good starting point. The session was a one-half day morning meeting followed by lunch and a tour of the Bowling Green State University libraries. Topics included: What is a Good Reference Book, How Do You Find Out About Good Reference Books, and New Reference Books in Science and Technology, each presented by an expert in the field.

A "spin off" from this workshop was the preparation of lists of new non-fiction books for six of the libraries by students in a Book Selection class at Bowling Green State University. Lists were prepared for Science books, books in the Fine Arts, Ecology, Philosophy and Religion, Economics and Anthropology, at the request of the librarians in these libraries. The other librarians, seeing them, wanted copies, so the lists were duplicated and sent to all fourteen libraries.

Twenty persons representing thirteen of the libraries attended this workshop. The librarian of the fourteenth library had signified her intention to come also, but the fire which destroyed the school in which the library was housed made it imperative that she remain with the salvage operations.

The Reference Question was the topic of the second workshop, held on February 13, 1973, at Napoleon. Twenty-eight persons from all fourteen libraries attended. Mrs. Paula Baker, Reference Librarian of the Wood County Public District Library discussed the reference interview. The audience was divided into groups, and did role-playing to put themselves into the place of the library patron. This was followed up with practice in easy techniques to use with patrons to help discover the "real reference question." Which reference tools to use was another topic in this workshop and a simple form, Which Reference Tools to Use[1] was given.

The next meeting, for librarians and trustees was held in Napoleon on March 27, 1973, to acquaint them with the progress of the project to that date. Nearly sixty persons, including State Library staff members, attended to enjoy a fine dinner at the Holiday Inn, and to hear the consultant give a progress report.

Reference workshops were resumed on April 10, 1973, when thirty-four librarians from thirteen libraries used the reference collection of the Napoleon Public Library to gain actual practice in their use, and to become more familiar with some of the basic tools. Questions had been prepared, and each person used the reference tools to actually find the answers. At a discussion session, problems were discussed and helpful pointers for the use of various reference tools given. A list of basic reference books was given all participants to check against their own holdings.

[1] Which Reference Tool To Use, Appendix F.

At Wauseon, nineteen librarians from eleven libraries gathered on April 10 to weed books from the collection of the Wauseon Public Library, and to discuss the problems involved in this library task. Each person actually weeded a specific section of the collection. Then, in a lively discussion session "problem" books were discussed, and reasons "pro and con" discard were debated vigorously.

The final workshop of the year, on May 15, 1973, at Bowling Green was on publicity techniques for small public libraries. Fifteen librarians from twelve libraries attended a practical meeting where they learned how to make letters and other simple publicity devices and had a chance to learn about many ways of making displays.

All of the libraries were represented at least twice during the five workshops specifically for library personnel, and ten of the libraries had staff in attendance at all of these meetings. Attendance for the five meetings totalled one hundred forty-eight.

Evaluations of the meetings--both formal[2] and informal, indicated that while a few thought the topics too elementary, most felt that they were "about right." The practical aspects were enjoyed, as well as the frequent opportunities for discussion. Some felt that they were "worth the whole project." Suggestions for future workshops included, Help on Non-Fiction Books for Adults; Selection of Materials for Smaller Libraries; Ordering and Choosing Materials and Time-Saving Routines for Libraries.

CHAPTER V

REFERENCE MATERIALS IN NW5 LIBRARIES

CHAPTER V

Reference Materials in NW 5 Libraries

One of the most important parts of the study was a checklist of the reference holdings of the libraries in the five counties. Since a part of the grant had been specifically set aside for the purchase of reference materials, and another part designated for reference workshops, it seemed appropriate to determine just what reference materials were available in each library, and in the area as a whole.

A copy of Barton's Reference Books[1] was purchased for each library. All items held by the library which were found in Barton, in the same, or in another edition, were checked. Items not in Barton were copied from shelf list entries and the copies of Barton plus card entries were returned to the surveyor for sorting and listing. This resulted in a flood of more than four thousand entries which nearly defied tabulation because of variety of entries, and differing copyright and printing dates. However all were checked and rechecked for entry, alphabetized and listed on sheets prepared for the purpose.[2] When the entries had all been retrieved from Barton the books were returned to each library, to serve as a selection aid for future purchases.

[1] Barton, Mary N. Reference Books. 7th ed. Baltimore, Enoch Pratt Free Library, 1970.

[2] See Appendix C for complete list of reference holdings.

Number of titles held in the fourteen libraries and their branches was 4226. Napoleon classified 1450 items as reference works. Defiance 611.[3] Other libraries held fewer titles, but it must be remembered that the libraries vary greatly in their policies concerning those books which are included in the reference section. Some prefer to hold many titles for in-library use, or for limited circulation; others prefer to circulate almost everything and keep very few items in a reference section.

In order to determine the up-to-dateness and quality of the collections, two measures were used. In addition to determining the number of titles held by each library that appeared in Barton,[4] the new edition of Reference Books for Small and Medium-sized Libraries[5] which appeared after the survey had started, was also checked against the holdings of the NW5 libraries.

No book listed in ALA and Barton was held by every library, although several came close; seventy-eight titles were held by no library in the area. This figure is a bit misleading since it includes several periodicals such as the ALA Booklist and Library Journal which were included by the libraries in their list of periodical holdings, and several indexes such as the Music Index and Art Index, which may be found in some of the libraries, although not classed as reference materials.

When we look at the proportion of titles in ALA and Barton which are held by each library, it is clear that there is a very wide range--from 55% to 11%. The smaller libraries should not aim for complete coverage, but should proceed to procure the ready-reference materials--almanacs, yearbooks, encyclopedias, dictionaries and the like--most likely to be used by their patrons. The county extension and county district libraries should supplement the holdings of the smaller units, to provide coverage for the whole area.

[4] Barton. op.cit.

[5] A.L.A. Reference Services Division. Reference Books for Small and Medium-sized Libraries. 2nd rev. ed. Chicago. ALA. 1973.

In examining the holdings, certain weaknesses appear. In no library, apparently, is there a Funk and Wagnalls Standard Dictionary of the English Language, nor a Dictionary of American Slang. Material on films, motion pictures and television was also lacking, as was the Negro in America and the Negro in the United States, two excellent bibliographies which should certainly be available somewhere in the area. The Demographic Yearbook of the United Nations, and Contemporary Quotations were other surprising omissions. The New York Times Index, although expensive might well be purchased by one library, or cooperatively by several of the libraries in one county, so that it is available in the area. A complete listing of the reference books listed in both ALA and Barton, together with those found in none of the libraries appears in Appendix C. The entire list of holdings by library, is also found in Appendix C.

Although it is to be hoped that the libraries in the area, through the newly formed NORWELD will make fullest use of the reference services of the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library, nevertheless there should be a good, up-to-date working reference collection in each library, varying from quick reference collections in the smallest libraries, to collections of some depth in the larger county centers. All residents of the area should have reasonable access to up-to-date reference works, which can be supplemented as needed by the larger Toledo collections.

The holdings, as shown here in Appendix C constitute a preliminary checklist, which needs to be revised and updated within the next two years by the libraries themselves.

#Reference materials listed as part of main library collection.

Of the three hundred two titles listed by both ALA and Barton no single library had more than about 55%. While it is not necessary, or, even desirable, that any library should have all of these books, it is probably desirable that one copy of each should be available somewhere in the area.

PERIODICAL AND NEWSPAPER HOLDINGS

CHAPTER VI

Periodical and Newspaper Holdings

Another group of materials, closely tied in with both the Reference Survey and the Ohio holdings are the newspaper and magazines available to patrons for current and reference use. As a part of the self-study, each library was asked to indicate its holdings of periodicals listed in the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. When it was found possible to extend the survey for a six-month period, the Planning Committee decided that a listing of periodicals not found in the Reader's Guide would also be of much use to all of the libraries. Newspaper holdings were also listed. National and large city papers taken currently were indicated, as well as the local papers, which were normally kept for longer periods.

Newspapers

Fifty-five different newspapers were held in the libraries and their branches.[1] Numbers varied from twenty-five different papers held by the Napoleon Public Library down to the one local paper found in several of the smallest libraries. All of the main libraries did take at least one paper, however, with the majority taking from three to eight. Local papers predominated, although five libraries subscribed to the Christian Science Monitor, four to the Daily or Sunday New York Times, four to the Toledo Blade, three to the Wall Street Journal and two to the National Observer.

[1] See Appendix D for complete list of newspapers.

Long runs of papers are a rarity, probably because of difficulty of storage. Only the Bryan Times has been microfilmed, although plans are underway to preserve others in this manner. The following table shows those local papers with substantial complete runs of ten years or more.

As the libraries develop cooperative plans, they may wish to consolidate duplicate holdings, and provide microfilmed runs of at least one or two of the national or large city papers to be held in one library for the use of all.

Periodicals

Of the one hundred fifty-six periodicals listed in the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature only seven were found in no library in the five counties. These periodicals are American Image, Conservationist, Film Quarterly, Ramparts, Retirement Living, Science and Public Affairs and Sea Frontiers. On the other hand, runs of ten years or more of ninety-eight of the Reader's Guide periodicals were found in at least one of the libraries in the five counties.[2] Very long runs--fifty years or more--of such periodicals as Harpers, Atlantic Monthly, National Geographic, American Mercury were also found. In some cases these were held by one library; in some other cases each of two or three libraries held part of a run. The complete finding list will now make it possible to locate these partial holdings; future cooperative effort might make it possible to have these holdings united in one library where access would be easier for the patron than at present.

In addition to the one hundred fifty-six indexed periodicals, three hundred seven others are held by one or more libraries in Northwest 5. Some are scattered issues, but most are runs of at least one year.

All libraries, and eight of the nine branches subscribe to, or are given at least one magazine. Most have many more, ranging up to the two hundred fifty-nine at Napoleon and two hundred forty-five at Defiance.

Although four hundred fifty-two different periodicals are found in the area, there is no one magazine to be found in all libraries. National Geographic, Popular Mechanics and Reader's Digest came the closest, the first two being found in twelve of the main libraries and seven of the branches, the third in thirteen of the main libraries and six of the branches. Others found in most libraries were Goodhousekeeping, Harpers Monthly, Newsweek, Time, U.S. News and World Reports, Consumer's Reports, Popular Science, Science Digest, Parent's Magazine and Today's Health.

Adding depth to both reference and Ohio holdings are several Ohio periodicals. At least nine are found in one or another of ten of the libraries. One library holds six, but most hold only from one to three.

CHAPTER VII

OHIO MATERIALS IN NW5 LIBRARIES

CHAPTER VII

Ohio Materials in NW5 Libraries

When the State Library granted a six-month extension of time to the Survey, the Planning Committee determined that one of the new projects to be undertaken should be a union list of Ohio materials. This list would be a valuable addition to the reference resources of all of the libraries, and would be useful also to librarians in other parts of the state who were searching for specific Ohio titles.

Accordingly, with the assistance of the Division of Educational Research and Services of the College of Education at Bowling Green State University, computer forms were prepared and sent to each library. Filling out a form for each item proved to be a time-consuming task, since the specialized computer format had to be used for all titles. Author, title, publisher, date and edition had to be given in each case. In addition, up to four subject entries were chosen for each book, selected from a list of ninety-nine subject headings provided by the Library of the Ohio Historical Society.

Although the first plan had been for author, title and subject listings, variations in author entries made it impossible to provide more than title and subject lists. After checking to correct entry errors in spacing, punctuation and the like, the forms were converted into computer cards, and a title and subject list printed out for each library. These appear as Volumes 2 and 3 of this report.

The cards will be available to member libraries so that new information can be fed into the computers in the future and the lists updated as necessary. It will also be possible for other libraries in northwest Ohio as, for example those in NORWELD, to add their entries at some later time, thus making available a reference resource of continued and increasing value. Indeed, this first list should be considered as preliminary, and definite plans made for adding omitted and new titles at regular intervals.

More than sixteen hundred entries were listed, comprizing more than nine hundred different titles. (Each edition of a title and each variant of author, publisher, etc., resulted in a separate computer entry.) Number of holdings per library varied greatly as was to be expected, but all libraries but one noted at least a few Ohio items. Two branch library holdings are combined with those of their parent libraries and are not indicated separately. Table XXI lists the number of entries by library.

Seven hundred forty-nine items are held by only one library, although in some cases different editions of the same title are held by two or more libraries. Although, as might be expected, the largest libraries hold the greater number of unique items, seventeen of the libraries hold at least one item found in no other library.

On the other end of the scale, no single entry was held by all of the libraries and surprizingly few titles were held by as many as six different libraries. Only twenty-two titles were held by six or more libraries. Of these, Roseboom's History of Ohio in one or another of its editions is found in fifteen of the libraries and Izant's This Is Ohio is found in fourteen. A complete list of these titles is found in Table XXII.

CHAPTER VIII

SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

CHAPTER VIII

Summary and Recommendations

The fourteen libraries of Northwestern Ohio are serving their patrons fairly well, on the whole. Hampered in many cases by less than adequate physical facilities, and by inadequate budgets and difficulty in obtaining staff, they are nevertheless dedicated to the idea of providing better library service for all. If these libraries are to continue to provide adequate service they need to work together even more closely than they have done in the past. Some of the recommendations for improvement of services which follow can be implemented almost immediately, at no additional cost. Others will require long and careful planning and will require funding. In some cases funds may be reallocated; in others new money will have to be sought.

Most of these libraries have a long and proud tradition of independent service. This fine record must not be lost nor diminished; but to preserve, enhance and extend it, true cooperative efforts must be developed. This will entail some readjustment and a good deal of give-and-take, but the result should be greatly improved services for all the residents of the area.

Some of the recommendations which follow have been made in earlier chapters of this report. They are repeated here to bring all recommendations together. Others do not pertain to one portion of the report above, so are set down here for consideration by the librarians and boards of NW5.

1. A permanent five county planning council should be formed to act as a body through which cooperative activities can be determined and implemented. Rotating membership will insure representation of all libraries over a period of time. This council should with the assistance of all the libraries, plan carefully the future steps of the NW5 for a period of several years, indicating priority items.

2. The planning council, and the individual libraries should examine carefully the new NORWELD structure, and should, whenever possible, participate and assist in its development as a true regional library structure.

3. All libraries not now receiving 100% of the intangibles tax should work toward this goal. In addition revenue sharing funds should be sought by each library to provide for added materials and services.

4. In-service training should be provided on a continuing, planned basis. In-depth work should be provided as needed; leading to appropriate college credit, if desired.

5. Basic reference materials should continue to be purchased so that each library has those encyclopedias, handbooks and other frequently used tools needed to answer day-to-day patron queries.

6. Contracts with the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library through NORWELD for reference services should be made to provide in-depth assistance to patrons which is not now available to them.

7. The possibility of contracting for special staff services from the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library should be explored through NORWELD or in other ways. Assistance with publicity, with services for special groups, such as Senior Citizens, with children's work, are examples of the kinds of needed assistance which is not now readily available to all of the libraries.

8. Provision should be made to revise and update the list of reference holdings so that it will prove of increasing benefit to all the libraries as a finding list of needed materials.

9. Plans should be made to provide basic reference materials, such as those found in both Barton's Reference Books and the ALA list of Reference Books for Small and Medium-sized Public Libraries in at least one library in the area.

10. Basic lists of ready reference books for the smallest libraries should be developed, and plans made to provide these for all libraries.

11. A viable inter-library loan system should be developed within the five county area so that the smallest libraries could take advantage of the larger and more complete collections in Napoleon, Bryan and Defiance.

12. Since population size does not permit these libraries to form an independent Area Library Service Organization, strong consideration should be given by each library to becoming a part of the NORWELD organization which has now been started with a State grant and local contributions.

    Governor Gilligan has proposed standard areas for the State. Williams, Henry, Wood, Fulton, Defiance, Paulding, Lucas, Ottawa, Sandusky and Seneca counties comprise one of these. If in fact, these areas become regions for all state services, there would be marked advantages for the NW5 to be a part of the area from the very beginning.

13. A film circuit should be developed, or contracts made with an existing circuit. Films were one of the items most requested as an additional wished for service by citizens of the area.

14. Back files of periodicals and newspapers should be held according to a plan devised by the libraries to insure coverage but discourage duplication of little used files. Central storage of back files of least used periodicals in one library in the area should be considered.

15. The preliminary list of Ohio holdings should be revised and updated periodically. Libraries in NORWELD outside the NW5 should be encouraged to add their Ohio items to this file. Doubtless there are as many unique items to be found in the old WELD area as were found in NW5. A complete listing for the whole area would be of value to the entire state.

16. Reorganization of the library in each county now designated as a county extension library into a county district library, with federation of the other independent libraries in the county with the larger unit.

    This would solidify boundaries of the larger unit, and would be a vehicle to strengthen service county wide. This seems particularly important in those areas where growth is projected as greatest, and where there is possibility of a new, very small unit opening in a village.

17. Smaller libraries in each county are strongly urged to consider federation with larger libraries in a county, to include provisions for special assistance as needed.

What about their length?	____	____	____

7. What do you believe to be the best and/or most useful features of the workshop (in addition to the good cookies and coffee!)?

8. What would you have omitted?

9. Other comments-good or bad-about this workshop. (Don't spare the horses'-comments here help us to do a better job for you next time!)

10. What about future workshops? What kind do you want? When? Where?

THANK YOU-please return before February 27, if you can, so that results will be available to planning committee which meets on that date.

Which Reference Tools to Use?

Encyclopedias

A source of answers to fact questions, usually of a simple nature such as who, what, when, where, how.

A source of background information, both for expert and layman.

A source for additional materials (in bibliographies).

Almanacs, Yearbooks

Relatively recent information on a subject or personality.

Brief facts.

Trends.

Informal index.

Some directory and biographical information.

Odd facts, unrelated bits of information.

Handbooks and Manuals

Ready reference source for a given field of knowledge.

Limited scope, fairly extensive coverage.

Biographical Sources

Brief sketches.

National or regional personalities.

Extensive materials, less than book-length.

Dictionaries

Word definition, spelling, pronunciation, syllabication, derivation (etymology).

Major place names; major personal names from history, mythology and the Bible; foreign terms, phrases, abbreviations, general slang terms.

Illustrations.

Geographical Sources

Location of places, natural features.

Population of town, country.

Nearest airline or railroad serving town.

Hotels in a city.

Roads leading to particular place.

Pronunciation of difficult names.

More specialized than general reference works.

Directories

Full name of individual, firm or organization.

Address and/or telephone number of individual or firm.

Description of a manufacturer's product or service.

Person in charge of firm, head of school, etc.

Limited biographical material.
